

news release: 07 December 2009

Lowell Group appoints Head of Strategic Projects

Lowell Group, the Leeds-based debt purchasing specialist, has recruited Samantha Crossley (nee Archer) from Experian to take on the newly-created role of Head of Strategic Projects.

Working closely with Lowell's senior management team Samantha will be responsible for ensuring key development projects are successfully planned, managed and delivered.

A mathematics graduate, Samantha has over 10 years' experience in the financial services sector successfully managing large-scale, complex projects on behalf of GE Capital, the Bradford & Bingley Group and, most recently, Experian Decision Analytics.

Commenting on her new role with Lowell, Samantha said: "I am passionate about leading large, multi-functional projects. Joining Lowell gives me a great opportunity to work with a group of young highly talented and motivated people in a successful business which has ambitious plans for future growth and development."

James Cornell, Lowell Group's Chief Executive Officer, said: "Samantha is an important addition to our senior management team. She has excellent project management skills which we will be putting to good use. We are constantly coming up with new ideas and new projects to successfully develop the business for the mutual benefit of our clients, customers and shareholders."